SATURDAY, FEB. 23, 1872. The Conxention and the Virginia

Debt. The Register does not approve our statement of the significance, the effect, and the apparent intent of the Convention's refusal to make provision in the new Constitution for the adjustment of West Virginia's share of Virginia's debt. Our cotemporary is frantically sure that this action does not mean repudiation, which he admits would "justly subject the State to universal contempt." But though he occupies near a column in saying this much, we look through his remarks in vain for a single substantial reason to support such a belief. He thinks the people of the State should very severely condemn us for saying the action of the Convention amounted to repudiation. We say if the people of the State pels to say so. For we say again that the convention has unquestionably taken the it applies.

3. The Legislature shall levy an annual 3. The Legislature shall levy an annual 3. The Legislature shall levy an annual 3. it, as we are bound to believe, deliberately and with a full understanding of what it was doing. The Register has said shall be annually appropriated to the supnothing, nor has anything appeared in its correspondence or ours, nor have we any other information, to modify the only on the supnort of free schools. Persons afflicted with bodily infirmity may be exempted from this tax, as the Legislature may direct by general law, and otherwise. what it was doing. The Register has said opinion already expressed; but on the other hand such information as comes to hand confirms it.

We meant to have stated this morning some additional grounds for believing that the Convention means repudiation, but at the hour of writing this paragraph we cannot command the necessary time or space, and shall have to defer further remark to another day. The attention of our readers is invited to a Charleston letter in our columns this morning on this

THE CHARGES AGAINST THE PRINTER -Yesterday's mails brought us the Kana wha Journal containing the first specific statement we have seen of the charges preferred against Mr. WALKER, the State printer. They relate entirely to the print ing of legislative bills for the present session, specifying 19 bills for printing which excessive charges were collected The specifications in each case are in this form: that the printer "did, for composition and press-work in printing House bill (so and so) charge and collect the sum of (---,) when in fact he was only entitled under the law to the snm of --)." We infer from this form of statement, what Mr. WALKER states in the Courier, that the accusers have estimated for "book and pamphlet work," for which predecessors. It is neither pamphlet nor book work. It has been rated among the "other kinds of printing" (job printing,) for which the law prescribes "the lowest customary rates of printing for private individuals or corporations." Those rates as we understand, Mr. WALKER was entitled to charge. Whether his charges are in extended to the product of predecessors. It is neither pamphlet nor to charge. Whether his charges are in excess of them we cannot say, not knowing anything about Charleston; prices for job work; but the large difference between what was charged in the cases specified ($216) and what the "book and pamphlet" rates would allow ($86) according to the accusation, leads us to express the belief that the charges are considerably too large unless the "customary rates" of job printing at Charleston are much higher than here. How this is the committee can ascertain; but starting on wrong premises as the accusation does, we judge it cannot be sustained in its present shape. We have given space to the various statements of our correspondents touching these charges, and it seems only fair to Mr. Walker that we should give him the praise of the great enterprise of building benefit of such facts as appear in his favor the Northern Pacific Railroad. We have upon definite information as to the points of the accasation.

mulation of boats loaded with applejack and other necessaries for the besieged. A private letter from our correspondent mentions that the dispatch as he sent it was simply that "steamboats were arriving." As he is liable to be charged with drawing a long bow, and as we have to be pretty careful what we print about Charleston, we hasten to deduct some Charleston, we hasten to deduct some twenty or twenty-two boats which appear to have got aboard somewhere along the

It is related that before the war a number of Southern politicians called one day on the editor of the New York Herald, which always had a fair Southern constituency, to induce him to espouse in his journal their side of the controversy. They went so far as to threaten, in case he did not do it, the entire withdrawal of Southern patronage from his paper, with an air as if they should thereby ruin it.

"Gentlemen," said Mr. Bennett, "the chambermaids of this city pay the Herald more money than the whole South."

A CHICAGO correspondent of the New York Journal of Commerce, complains that for one hundred and thirty-nine days since the great fire, with a single exception, not a dollar has been paid by the receivers of the bankrupt insurance companies in New York, when the Chicago policy holders are known to be suffering for their money.

THE Charleston Journal corrects our tement as to itself, that "all the news- of the family invited. papers at Charleston had been compelled to suspend for want of paper." The Journal says it has not suspended a single is-
